I met Kevin via Twitter and we instantly found common ground in seeing a lack of vision for the City of London and what we, as a generation of concerned citizens, can do to help fix that.

Kevin has no shortage of ideas, and always finds a creative way to implement them. From his "52 Weeks" initiative, to the recently founded MugShot Lounge, to his involvement in Hack The Vote, Kevin's energy and creativity is boundless.

Kevin is a welcome addition to any project or organization that's looking for someone with creativity, intelligence and a "can do" attitude.

Kevin worked with me for the 2010 LOLA fest, where he did a superb job of documenting the festival experience through photo and video. His knowledge of content creation and creative mind provided us with amazing art that captures the look and feel of LOLA. Kevin's ability to think outside the box, and relentless efforts to make things bigger and better mean he's the perfect man for any job.

I have worked with Kevin on a number of community initiatives and have been amazed at his creativity and ability to generate impact in our community through pure force of will.

We recently hired Kevin's new venture Mugshot Lounge to our client appreciation event. True to form, Kevin was creative, engaging and delivered the kind of experience I have come to expect from him from his community work.

I would highly recommend Kevin for any position that requires creativity, passion, organization and the ability to move people on a grass routes level.
